Colorado Train Rides Perfect For Leaf Peeping

Sit back and take in the state’s stunning autumnal foliage. Nothing against autumnal car rides or hikes, but leaf-peeping deserves your full, undivided attention. This year, keep your eyes on Colorado’s colorful fall foliage – not oncoming traffic or the rock-strewn trail beneath your feet.

ROCKY MOUNTAINEER: ROCKIES TO THE RED ROCKS

The Journey: One-way options from Denver to Moab, Utah (or vice versa). From the moment you board the Rocky Mountaineer in the Mile High City, you’ll be treated like a Vanderbilt. First, you’ll wind west through the Front Range peaks before the tracks sidle up next to the Colorado River, its banks lined with golden leaves, on your way to Glenwood Springs. There, sneak away for a relaxing soak in the mineral pools before tucking yourself into a cozy, king-size bed at a partner hotel. On day two, the forest gives way to tawny-hued canyons and thin rock spires called hoodoos. Don’t pack a lunch: Hosts serve multicourse meals and describe the sights, like the 6.2-mile Moffat Tunnel, outside your panorama-windowed passenger car.

LEADVILLE RAILROAD

The Journey: Out-and-back from Leadville. Visitors ascend about 700 feet into the reds, oranges, and yellows of the aspen-covered upper Arkansas River Valley at a leisurely 10 miles per hour—slow enough for an Instagram-worthy snapshot on the 2.5-hour trip. Insider tip: At the depot, choose a seat facing town so you’ll be looking toward the valley, rather than turning your head, as you descend.

CRIPPLE CREEK & VICTOR NARROW GAUGE RAILROAD

The Journey: Out-and-back from Cripple Creek. The still-active Cripple Creek & Victor Mine is considered the richest in Colorado history—and you’ll steam right up to it on this 45-minute, four-mile trip. Look for wild donkeys, descendants of the hard-working burros that hauled pay dirt out of the tunnels more than 100 years ago. Littles will love the locomotives’ cheerful color schemes, reminiscent of Thomas the Tank Engine and his vibrant cartoon train friends, and get a kick out of the engineer’s long-standing tradition of blowing the whistle in the aptly named Echo Valley. Book your leaf-peeping expedition early, as this locomotive only runs through October 8.

ROYAL GORGE ROUTE RAILROAD

The Journey: Out-and-back from Cañon City. With rugged canyon walls rising 1,000-plus feet overhead, this Arkansas River-adjacent route is a geologic and historical marvel: Two railroad companies skirmished in the 1870s to claim right of passage through the Royal Gorge to Leadville’s silver mines. Modern-day train operators spin tales of those times while you enjoy a scratch-made meal with ingredients largely sourced from Colorado (such as brioche from Denver’s Harvest Moon Baking Company and chicken raised at Red Bird Farms in Englewood) during the 1.5-to-2.5-hour ride. For Oktoberfest-inspired entrées and beers, choose the 12:30, 3:30, or 6:30 p.m. departure between September 9 and October 21.

Go Apple Picking or Drink Cider

Peak apple-picking season nears the end of September and is a fun activity to do during the fall in Colorado. There are several farms and orchards throughout the state that encourage people to pick their own apples, making this a great family activity.

Near Denver, check out Happy Apple Farm, Berry Patch Farms, Nelms Farm, and Ya Ya Farm and Orchard.

Near Grand Junction, visit Fruit Basket Orchards and Big D's Delicious Orchards in Hotchkiss.

But don't just pick the apples, drink them too. September is also the perfect time to grab a cider at one of the many cideries in the state. Stem Ciders in Denver is a great place to start and the Colorado Cider Company plants its own orchard on the Western Slope with a tasting room in the city.

Further north along the Front Range, check out: Wild Cider in Firestone, Summit Hard Cider in Fort Collins, and St. Vrain Cidery in Longmont. In the North Fork Valley, sample some ciders at Jack Rabbit Hill and Big B's Juices and Hard Cider in Hotchkiss. And along the Western Plateau, savor every sip at Talbott's Cider Company in Palisade.

The windows are open, admitting the September breeze:

a month that smells like notepaper and pencil shavings, autumn leaves and car oil.

A month that smells like progress, like moving on.

National Clean Up Day

On the third Saturday in September, National CleanUp Day encourages all of us to take action to make the entire country a better place to live.

Just think, what if everyone just picked up one piece of litter? From coast to coast, organizations and individuals alike join forces to clean up parks, trails, beaches, mountains, and open spaces.

Outdoor spaces free of trash and litter create a more enjoyable experience for everyone. Preservation of our forefathers' legacy is up to all of us.

Litter, debris, and trash mar the beauty of our natural landscapes. National CleanUp Day puts litter in its place – in the trash and recycle bins. The observance provides an opportunity to make those messes right and give the landscape a fresh, clean sweep! Communities, corporations, civic organizations, parks and recreation departments, and private citizens will all be uniting together to make this year's celebration a success.

By participating on this special day, you will be helping to send a message to your communities that you care about keeping our natural surroundings clean throughout the year. Won't you join us to make your community beautiful?

September days have the warmth of summer in their briefer hours, but in their lengthening evenings a prophetic breath of autumn.

–Rowland E. Robinson

Read A Book Day

National Read a Book Day is observed annually on September 6th. On August 9th, we all celebrated National Book Lovers Day. While these bookish days may seem similar, National Read a Book Day invites us ALL to grab a book we might enjoy and spend the day reading.

Labor Day

Labor Day on the first Monday of every September recognizes the men and women who labor to build this country. Through a time-honored tradition with roots in the coordinated efforts of the labor movement of the 1800s, we salute the American workforce.

Since the founding of the United States, the country has relied on its workforce for its infrastructure. From its streets and buildings to its transportation and security, the nation runs on labor. The labor of what we create, build and harvest fuels our education and inspires our dreams.
